(BY UNITED PRESS.)

The bill is intended to carry out the platform pledge of the democratic party. The bill provides that candidates for public office and their managers shall file weekly with the secretary of state and county clerk a statement of financial disbursements and contributions in election campaigns.

It specifically names the purposes for which money may be spent and the amount allowed to be spent by each candidate according to the rank of his office.

United States senators are barred from contributing toward expenses of legislative candidates. The measure provides a felony for violation should it become a law.

The campaign expenses of United States senators is limited to $2,500; for congressmen, $1,500; candidates for state tickets, $2,000; state senators, $500; and assemblymen, $250.

BRODHEAD CASE IS BEFORE COURT TODAY

Judge Grimm Hears Arguments Before Circuit Court To Settle Affairs of Tobacco Firm.

(BY UNITED PRESS.)

The case of W. A. Shelley versus J. P. Mooney and L. W. Terry is being heard by Judge Grimm today. It is an action for an accounting and the dissolution of the copartnership between J. P. Mooney & Company, makers and dealers in leaf tobacco, at Broadhead, in this state.

In August, 1905, Mr. Shelley, who is a merchant doing business in Edgerton, this county, and J. P. Mooney and L. W. Terry, of Broadhead, formed a copartnership for the purpose of buying and dealing in leaf tobacco. Mr. Shelley was to furnish the money, and the other two members of the firm were to buy and pack the tobacco, and attend to the business.

It seems that they purchased a large amount of the tobacco crop of 1906. Some question arose in 1908 about the sale of the tobacco. It was finally sold by Mr. Shelley, at a loss, as he claims.

The hearing before Judge Grimm is to determine the amount of this loss, and settle some other matters in dispute between the members of the firm. John Cunningham and H. S. Sloan are attorneys for Mr. Shelley, and Thos. S. Nolan represents Messrs. Mooney & Terry.

ATTACKED JUAREZ TODAY WITH VERY STRONG FORCE OF INSURGENT TROOPS

Battle Across the Border From El Paso Is Being Waged—Federal Thought To Be Losing Heavily.

(BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.)

El Paso, Texas, Feb. 2.—The attack upon the city of Juarez, across the border by Mexican rebel troops under General Orozco is on. Wounded and riderless horses with bloodstained saddles stumped across the border into American territory tell the story of a fierce engagement now in progress south of the city between five hundred federal infantry and cavalry and the advance guard of the rebel soldiers.

The death list will be enormous. It is reported the rebels are planning to take Juarez before night. The main rebel army was temporarily checked in its advance by blowing up a bridge between Juarez and Samalayuca. Intense excitement prevails and Red Cross hospitals are preparing to care for the wounded.

The clash between the rebels and federals occurred before daylight between Juarez and Samalayuca, according to federal troops, who retreated to Juarez this morning. They brought three wounded and admitted two others were killed but said they were killed while wrecking bridge to stop advance of rebels on Juarez. It is believed the federal loss was heavier than they report as many riderless horses have been coming in to Juarez all forenoon.

RETRACT CHARGE AGAINST STANDARD

Magazine Publishers Express Regret at Error.

PROBABLY STOP LIBEL SUITS

Hampton's and Moffett Declare Upon Investigation Oil Company Is Not Connected With Sale of Impure Candles.

New York, Feb. 2.—The libel suits instituted by the Standard Oil company against the Broadway Magazine company, publishers of Hampton's Magazine and Cleveland Moffett, the author of the alleged libel, will probably never come to trial.

As will be observed in the statements issued by the defendants in the suit, a full and complete retraction of the charge that glucose had been used in the manufacture of candy and that the agents of the Standard Oil company in eastern Pennsylvania and lower New Jersey "had been arrested, brought into court and branded as deliberate poisoners of little children." It was the sentence about the poisoning of children that caused the oil company to begin the suits, the first of the kind ever started by that big corporation.

Before beginning the action attorneys for the Standard concern called upon the Hamptons to retract, but this they refused to do and summons were at once obtained in the United States circuit court here in suits for $350,000 damages against the magazine people.

Charge Is Retracted. Now the magazine publishers and Mr. Moffett have issued the following signed statements retracting the charge on which the libel suits were based:

"In the matter of the libel suits brought by the Standard Oil company for $350,000 damages against Hampton's Magazine and for $100,000 damages against Cleveland Moffett, the former the publisher, and the latter the writer, of an article in the February issue of the magazine which defamed the company in connection with the sale of glucose and candy in Philadelphia, the following retractions have been signed in the office of Shearman & Sterling, the Standard Oil company's lawyers in the case, and have been issued from the company's offices at No. 26 Broadway.

"Hampton's Magazine, 60 West Thirty-fifth St., New York.

"Jan. 31, 1911.

"Standard Oil Company, 26 Broadway, New York.

"Dear Sirs: In the February issue of Hampton's Magazine, there was published an article written by me, entitled, 'Candy and the Food Poisoners.' In that article I referred to the investigation of Mr. Cassidy, with respect to the manufacture and sale of impure candies in Philadelphia, and made the statement that your company manufactured and sold impure material which went into these candies and that, when the various dealers were arrested and fined, at the instance of Mr. Cassidy, your company paid the fines.

"Upon investigation, I have ascertained that your company was in no way connected with the transactions referred to and I hasten to retract in the fullest manner all charges made against your company and to express my sincere regret that I should have fallen into this serious error. Yours truly, Cleveland Moffett."

"Jan. 31, 1911.

"Standard Oil Company, New York City.

"Dear Sirs: Referring to foregoing letter of Mr. Cleveland Moffett to you we beg to state that we are convinced that Mr. Moffett was in error in his statements with reference to your company. We greatly regret that these errors should have been made. It is the desire of Hampton's Magazine to be accurate and fair in all things. In our March number we will publish this letter and the foregoing letter of Mr. Moffett. Yours truly, Bond, H. Hampton, President, Broadway Magazine, Inc."

CULTURED CLARICE

Dotty Wilk had gone visiting in Chicago and when she returned home with a bunch of puffs on the back of her head which she hadn't taken away with her and a ghost book and a pig book excitement spread through the village.

Dotty had attended a party while she was in the city and the hostess had made everybody do a page in her ghost book. It was a bound volume of blank pages folded through the middle and the process was to open a page, splutter a lot of ink blots on it, fold it back and press it down hard. Then you signed your name and somebody else cried, "Oh, now let me try it!"

In the pig book you drew a pig with your eyes shut and you couldn't take the pencil from the paper after you had started.

Everybody went crazy over these fads and Peterson, the druggist, who also sold stationery and magazines, had to order a second consignment of the popular volumes.

Nearly all the girls owned either one book or the other. But when somebody asked Clarice Emerson how many pages in hers she had filled the questioner ran up against a stone wall. Clarice elevated her delicate eyebrows a trifle and said faintly that she was interested neither in ghosts nor in pigs. "I have a sentiment book, however, which I will show you," she said.

Thereupon she laid in the hands of the unabashed young person who had introduced the subject a book which Clarice herself had made of pale blue linen paper and water-color paper covers, laced together with blue ribbon to match. Clarice had painted a spray of wild roses on the cover. It was, indeed, a charming volume.

"What's it for?" stammered the puzzled holder of the sentiment book.

Clarice looked gently pained. "I am going to have my friends write beautiful quotations of noble sentiments of their own in it," she said, softly.

Everybody said that it was exactly like Charles Emerson and that she was a ridiculous stuck-up thing, and who cared, anyhow? Clarice always sat with her eyes looking upward, like St. Cecilia at the organ, and her clothes were always limp and draped. She held things with the tips of her fingers and she talked about your soul. So she was not exactly popular but her father was prominent and she could not be snubbed.

When she started out snarling people with her sentiment book people broke into cold perspiration and twisted their feet awkwardly around chair legs and bit their tongues and gripped the pen hard trying to remember something noble. They turned the pages to see who had written what and they murmured, "How lovely!" or "How true!"

After stock sentiments, like "Art is long and time is fleeting," "Be good and you will be happy," and "Count that day lost whose low demanding sun views from thy hand no worthy action done," had all been used up in Clarice's book late comers had terrible fumes. Secretly they thought the pig books lots more fun. In fact, whenever Clarice appeared in the distance, with a limp volume adorned with wild roses in her hand, there was a stampede.

Artie Kline made a great hit at a party which Clarice did not attend by going around asking every one in a dying-swan tone, "Won't you write a noble sentiment in my little book?" Oh, do write a gem of thought in my book!"

When Professor Gittles, the new teacher of English in the high school, reached town and it was seen that he was barely thirty and handsome in an austere way, the feminine population became deeply interested. He was invited everywhere and pig and ghost books were thrown at him by girls of every sort. It seemed very daring to ask a professor to draw a pig with his eyes shut, so it became a popular game.

While he was filling pages in seven assorted books which had been thrust at him, Clarice Emerson drifted through the crowd one night. She smiled at him with a beautiful mingling of respectful fear and modest hope and said, sweetly: "Dear Professor Gittles, may I ask you to inscribe a sentiment in my little book?" Some great thought of some famous writer or of your own. Of course, I should be especially pleased with one of your own."

Her glance at the frivolous pig and ghost books before him was delicately contemptuous and the professor was instantly furious at their owners for having put him in this humiliating position before so cultured a young person. He arose with alacrity.

"Certainly, Miss Emerson, he said. "Come, let us sit over in this quiet corner by the lamp and I will look at your wonderful book and compose my thoughts. It is such a treat to find one so young and charming with such high ideals! And did you do the cover, too?"

Of course, after that it was all over except the rice and odd shoes. The other girls, when they got over their rage, said that both Clarice and Prof. Gittles were stupid, affected bobs, and who cared, anyhow? Then they ostentatiously went and bought more pig books.

FIND BODY IN FIELD

MYSTERY OF KENOSHA GIRL DEEPENED BY DISCOVERY.

Much Woeed Daughter Vanishes After Quarrel With Father Over Love Affairs.

Kenosha, Wis., Feb. 2.—In an out-of-the-way cabbage field three miles north of Kenosha, C. J. Jacobson, a farmer, found the dead body of Mary Zahon, twenty-four years old, the daughter of Paul Zahon, a farmer in the town of Somers.

Miss Zahon disappeared from the residence of her parents on the night of January 8, and since that time police officers in all parts of the country have been seeking her.

The body was clad only in a suit of underwear. The girl evidently had been dead for a long time, as the body had been frozen stiff, and its condition indicated that it long had been exposed to the weather.

The Kenosha police say they have not been able to find any motive for the killing of the girl.

The disappearance of the girl has been a mystery with many interesting angles. The young woman was of attractive appearance. She had been employed in a Kenosha factory. She was not without her sweethearts, and on the night of her disappearance she had quarreled with her father, who had urged her to marry one of his friends, much older than herself.

The girl had declined to see this man, had gone to her room in tears, and had told her father that she would not see any one.

Two hours later it was discovered that her room was empty and, although a search was made, no trace of her was found.

Charles A. Ingram, Speaker Wisconsin Legislature.

Madison, Wis., Jan. 31.—Now methods of law making will be tried this year in Wisconsin under the direction of Speaker Charles A. Ingram, a business man of modern business methods, which bear promise of being the best in many years. Every state legislature confronts the problem of long sessions of the legislature coming up for consideration the last few days. Ingram has elevated this by having all of the big measures presented at once, like the bills for an income tax, workmen's insurance, state aid to highways and control of water powers, and ordered committee hearings every afternoon. Small bills are being introduced daily, but he refuses to refer them to committees, and makes all of the members work on the big measures. As a result two of the big measures will be up for passage next week. After a week's trial the members are enthusiastic over the plan and believe that the session will be of less than three months' duration, as compared to the past three sessions being more than five months long. After all of the big bills have been disposed of the smaller bills will be referred to committees and the work of cleaning these out of the way will be vigorously prosecuted.

Although in an embroiled stage, the plan has attracted wide attention and the states of New York and Iowa have already written for the detailed plans of the new legislative organization. Ingram is a farmer, banker, editor and lawyer, who has spent four years in perfecting his progressive plan, and the legislature this year has rewarded him by electing him speaker. He is the father of the proposed "income tax" law, but above all he is a business man forcing scientific business methods upon the Wisconsin legislature.

Modern Lovers of Munchausen. Ordinary fiction is not bold enough for the natural man. He loves to read tales of wonder, of supernatural powers and of more than human adventures. CANADIAN RECIPROCITY.

Careful consideration of the Canadian reciprocity project which President Taft and Secretary Knox have prepared for the acceptance by congress leads to the belief that it is a most wise state paper and that its effect will be lasting. In this connection the opinion of the Christian Science Monitor of Boston, a most conservative eastern paper, is of especial interest. The Monitor believes that every sincere friend of a closer and a better relationship between the United States and Canada must be desirous that no expectations unwarranted by the plain facts shall be held out with reference to the operation—in the event of its confirmation—of the reciprocal trade arrangement upon which the executive departments of the two governments have reached an agreement. In this country it is especially to be hoped that statements regarding the probable working out of the proposed arrangement shall be conservative. There has been enough said in some quarters already to lead many to believe that reciprocity would be followed by a great and general decline in the cost of living on this side of the border. A Washington despatch puts the President in the position of endorsing the view that if support for the measure is withheld by the two branches of his own party he can look to help from the people "who think he is trying to lower the cost of food."

The President evidently anticipated something of this kind when preparing his message, for that document contains these words: "I do not wish to hold out the prospect that the unrestricted interchange of food products will greatly and at once reduce their cost to the people of the country." That its tendency will be in this direction, it is only reasonable to assume. But if friends of reciprocity at this juncture shall be conservative in their statements, two very good results may be counted upon; firstly, much of the opposition to the carrying out of the arrangement will disappear; secondly, much disappointment following its carrying out will be avoided.

That there exists a wide difference of opinion, even among those who are arrayed against the reciprocity plan for special reasons, as to the effect it would be likely to have upon prices in the United States, must be evident to anybody who has taken the time to read the various expressions of opinion. They are as far apart in promiscuity as in conclusions. The prevalent mistake is due to the fact that they do not understand the matter as it relates to Canada. They seem to assume that Canada has on hand an immense surplus of foodstuffs that it will be able to dump upon this country at a moment's notice in the event of a ratification of the arrangement. But Canada has no great surplus in any line. If she should undertake to flood the American market it would only be by cutting off the supply and sending prices skyward at home.

In time, the encouragement that an open market in the United States would give her producers might lead them, it is true, to increase production. However, somewhat similar conditions have not increased production in this country. Every indication that reciprocity can hold out to the Canadian producer—as far as better prices are concerned—has been held out to the American producer within the last five years, with no very satisfying results. Benefits that will accrue from a freer trade relationship between the two countries will hardly be manifested in perceptibly higher prices on one side or perceptibly lower prices on the other, but in a strengthening of both, industrially and commercially. Reciprocity will remove an artificial barrier between two peoples whose interests are common. It will give greater stability to the prosperity of both nations. It will increase the productive area available to both countries, assuring better distribution not only in times of plenty, on either side of the line, but in times of scarcity as well.

TO REGULATE THE TRAFFIC.

The bill introduced by Assemblyman Gettle, a few days ago, the substance of which was published in last evening's issue, seeks to create a law similar to the Pennsylvania and Nebraska statutes, which holds the landlord liable with the tenant for damages resulting from the traffic in spirituous liquors.

The two states mentioned have the best regulative laws of any states in the union, and there is no reason why Wisconsin should not enjoy the same wholesome regulation. It is no hardship to the landlord, but simply makes him careful to select tenants who respect and observe the law.

The fact is generally recognized that Wisconsin is likely to be a wet state, for many years to come. This means that the best which can be expected is regulative laws. How stringent these laws shall be depends entirely on the people. The standard of morality in any community ought to be high enough to demand protective measures for a business which keeps the courts busy, and which at best is a menace to society. The Gettle measure will bear careful consideration.

What Wisconsin needs is the repeal of some of the fool laws that are now on the statute books rather than the placing of new ones there. If the legislature made a clean sweep of some of the most objectionable, reduced the most of government materially, did away with commissions and brought down the taxes they would have something to be proud of.

Just wait! Some day there will be a passenger aeroplane line running from Roy West to Havana on time. How convenient one of those men-birds would have been during the Spanish war when everyone was looking for the missing Spanish squadron that was safe in port.

It is a cliche the "ground hog" saw his own shadow today. If he did not, winter will go on just the same and the coal man will smile. This is a fact that the legislature could well look into if they want to reform something and must be busy.

Milwaukee is entertaining the great army of the unemployed and enjoying it too. Mayor Seldel is having the time of his life trying to convert the delegates to socialism and will probably succeed.

Danville is ready for that investigation after all. It has decided it can not afford to let West Union, Ohio get ahead of them in their advertising matter.

It is up to the House of Lords now to lay its head upon the chopping block and look pleasant. The Commons will do the rest and it will be a case of Poot Bah all over again.

New York is reported to have a future population of 35,000,000 in 1965 and already Tammany leaders can hardly wait.

Colonel Roosevelt asserts very loudly that he is a progressive although no one contradicted him as far as can be learned.

Now that the upper berths in sleeping cars are cheaper we may expect more travel on all the railroad immediately.

The early bird, so the sage affirm, is always catching the choicest worms and this is proof, says that wise old grinch, that man should hasten to leave his couch. But the richest sleep that a man can have, the kind that acts as a balm and salve, is the sleep that comes when he ought to rise if he'd be "healthy, wealthy and wise." When a man gets up ore his sleep is done, and starts scratching around for more, he may be filling his coffers deep, but, jumping giquot, he loses sleep. A yard of slumber is worth more kate than anything in this gloomy vale. Let others rustle their vigils keep, while I'm enjoying my morning sleep. Let others capture the festive plunk; I'll snore a few in my downy bunk. And when I rise after sleeping much, I feel like working, to beat the Dutch; my head is clear and my mind serene, I am not grouchy, or cross or mean. I shall not be by the sages bosomed; their heads are addled, their wires are crossed, and I do not suffer for early weworms, or ben constrictors or tonds or gerna.

Heart to Heart Talks.

SLEEP
What is sleep?
The wisest man in the world does not know. Although we pass half our lives in that state, it is as much a mystery as it was in the days of Nimrod.

We only know the body lies inert, the muscles relaxed and the nerves quieted for a time. The objects of the material world are shut out by the curtains of the eyelids, and there is no activity in the objective mind. But—Only a part of us sleeps.

A part of the mind—the psychologists call it "the subjective mind"—is watchful and alert. It carefully supervises the functions that are carried on during sleep.

The objective mind—or is it the soul?—where does it go?
Who knows?
Does it sometimes wander in the garden of immortality? We can neither affirm nor deny the statement.

We only know this:
If we go to sleep when the mind is fretted with the worries of the day we do not rest so well as we do when the mind is composed. We sleep fitfully and arise unrefreshed.

It is a fine conception and borne out by experience that the mind, if properly directed, will go to work during sleep to restore the body.

If the mind is distracted and torn by anxiety it appears to go about the work of recuperating itself and leaves the body to take care of itself.

What fountain of recuperation does it find? And where?
However, when conditions are right and the mind is directed to the task before sleep it seems to put forth its best endeavors to heal and help its partner, the body.

If you do not believe this, try it. You will be convinced if you give the experiment a trial.

It is this sort of sleep that is "nature's sweet restorer" that "knits up the raveled sleeve of care" and gives the body the feeling of refreshment.

Therefore the importance of a proper frame of mind before you enter the precincts of Sleepland.

Especially should children go to sleep with happy thoughts. It is one of the cruelest things to send a child sobbing to its sleep.

Dispel every form of worry before you sleep.

Leave the mind—or soul?—free to do its offices of restoring the body or to wander at its will in the universe of God.

Spanish Plow.
In Spain about the only kind of plow in use is the primitive wooden affair with one handle and a tongue. To this is hitched a pair of small oxen or of mules yoked up like oxen. The driver rests his right foot on a rear extension to keep the plow from jumping out of the ground, steadying himself by touching his left foot when he seems likely to lose his balance.

THE GROUND HOG SAW HIS SHADOW

Today was "ground hog" day. The woodchuck, humbly called the ground hog, looked out of his winter quarters today and the sun shone sufficiently so that he seen his shadow, and he retired in fright and will not come out again for ever so long, which means that we are to have a late spring. On the other hand, if he sneezed out and looked about and no black object was there to frighten him, he would have staid with the result that our spring might have begun early and remained with us until late, instead of merging into a second winter-torn along about May, the way it did last season.

An old verse thus tells of the superstition in regard to the day, also known as Candlemas:
"If Candlemas day be fair and bright
"Winter will take another flight,
"But if Candlemas day brings clouds and rain,
"Winter is gone and won't come again."

Idea of Thrifty Queen.
The literature of the kitchen sometimes sheds a light on the traits of historical personages. For example, it is not interesting to read in a new book of recollections of the origin of that rather agreeable dish of bread-crumbs, fruit and spices known as "apple Charlotte." It appears that the thrifty wife of George III. invented the pudding in order to use up the weekly palace scraps.

MOTHER'S ANGEL

"My darling," said a fond mother, who believed in appealing to children's tender feelings instead of punishing them, "if you are so naughty you will grieve mamma so that she will get ill, and have to lie in bed in a dark room and take nasty medicine, and then she may die and have to be taken away out to the cemetery and be buried, and you—"

The child had become more solemn, but an angelic smile overcame his face at his mother's last words, and throwing his arms about her neck he exclaimed: "Oh, mamma, and may I sit beside the coachman?"

Pity and friendship are passions incompatible with each other, and it is impossible that both can reside in any breast for the smallest space without impeding each other. Acres Already Contracted For This Year Exceeds Total of Last Year.
By Janesville's best sugar industry is in a flourishing condition is shown by the fact that the acreage already contracted by the Rock County Sugar Company for the year 1911 reaches nearly 6,300 which is over a thousand acres more than the entire acreage last year. At the present time there are some twenty-five men traveling over northern Illinois and southern Wisconsin soliciting acreage from the farmers and as time for this work does not close before the first of June a record breaking run next fall is assured.
"Last year was an exceptionally prosperous year in the beet business," said M. H. Osburn, general manager of the company, today, "and prospects are very good for eclipsing all previous records this year."
Mr. Osburn stated that higher grade farmers were taking up the matter of beet raising on extensive scales. An illustration of this he pointed out that Mr. Morgan of the Morgan farm at Beloit has contracted to raise a hundred acres this year, after realizing $125 per acre from the forty acres raised last season. Even in Racine and Kenosha counties, in the heart of the cabbage country, contracts are extensively signed and over two thousand acres are promised at present.
Farmers are more generally coming to realize, Mr. Osburn said, that beet culture is beneficial to the soil which is opposite to the prevalent belief at the beginning of this industry in this section. Sugar is not taken from the soil, but is supplied almost entirely by water and sun, while the roots of the plant extend deep into the ground loosening the earth and taking the place of the subsiding process.

BURNS WAS HELD TO APPEAR FOR TRIAL

Beloit Assaulter Is To Be Tried On the 10th—Merklein Furnishes Bail.
Beloit closed doors in the municipal court of Beloit, yesterday morning, Thomas Burns, charged with a serious offense, given his preliminary hearing and held for trial, Friday, Feb. 10. His bail was placed at $1000 and he was brought back to the county jail here last night to await trial. The little nine year old girl, her mother and the physician testified at the hearing and it is conjectured that it will go hard with Burns. The physician has for his attorney, C. Buckley of Beloit and District Attorney Dunwiddie is conducting the prosecution.
Carl Merklein, the other Beloit man who was imprisoned for a similar offense and whose bail was placed at $1000, furnished bail yesterday and the case was continued until Feb. 7th.

FIRE CHIEF FILES ANOTHER COMPLAINT

Wisconsin Telephone Company To Be Defendant in Second Action Brought Against It By the City.
The Wisconsin Telephone Company is again made the defendant in an action commenced by the City of Janesville. The complaint in the case was drawn up yesterday by City Attorney H. L. Maxwell and filed in municipal court yesterday afternoon by Chief of the Fire Department H. C. Klein. The summons are returnable on February tenth.
The charge against the telephone company is violation of the city ordinance with regard to electric wires in the placing of the wires of the company on Holmes street. According to Chief Klein, the actions against the telephone company are only a beginning and more complaints will be made, not only against the Wisconsin Telephone company but against "other" companies as well.

BIG GAME SCHEDULED FOR SATURDAY NIGHT

University Cardinals From Madison Will Meet the Lakota Cardinals at the West Side Rink.
Manager Langdon of the Lakota Cardinals announced today that the University Cardinals of Madison will meet the local players in a basketball game at the West Side rink on Saturday evening. In the two previous contests with this team which have been played here during the winter, the Madison players were able to take the hands by a close margin. The local players are on for blood, however, and if their recent demonstrations are to be taken as any criterion, they will give the visitors a hard contest. They do not propose to let the Madison aggregation make it three straight.

SHERIFF IN FAVOR OF THE ROCK PILE

Says Certain Class of Inmates Should Be Put At Breaking Stone Or Sawing Wood.
"It is my opinion," said Sheriff Ransom, this morning, "that a stone pile at the county jail would be a good thing, if it were conducted in the proper manner. The matter brought before him in the face of the present agitation among the members of the county board to provide for such a means of employment for inmates of the jail at the spring meeting of the board. The sheriff said further that he firmly believed that such a stone pile would go a long way towards reducing the influx of the hold into the city.
From 1891 to 1893, during the term of Sheriff J. W. Hogan, there was a stone pile at the county jail for the use of the transient, and during his whole term there were only a little over 400 inmates in the place. From that time up to the period before Mr. Ransom took the office, the total attendance for each two year term has been on the increase. Mr. Ransom thought that this seemed to prove pretty conclusively that the labor had a tendency to keep the transients from stopping off here and also to keep the holdouts from looking to the county jail as a winter residence. The sheriff said that at Monroe they had instituted the stone piling system as well as a wood pile and that it had a very good effect, as they never had more than two inmates at one time. He explained that he considered that the hold and the man who committed offenses for the sake of being confined in the county jail, should be put at hard labor.

Why He Quit Editing.
"You say you were once the editor of a newspaper?"
"Yes, baby, and it was a very bright little sheet, if I do say it."
"How does it happen then that you are forced to ask at back doors for meals?"
"It is merely a case of the irony of fate. I had a printer who was near-sighted, and one afternoon when he made up the paper he got a wedding notice and a murder trial mixed, so that after describing the costume of the bride it said the condemned man almost collapsed when sentence was pronounced."

Links of Eternal Life.
We cannot put into the language of our limited life any satisfactory or adequate picture of that which transcends all our experience in the way that this thought of a great common source and sustainer of life does. But we can order our lives about this as their center; we can live as if the universe was held together by the golden bands of love and law.

BUTTERMILK

ONE OF PROFITABLE BREEDS

Silver Pencilled Wyandotte Gaining in Popularity on Account of Many Good Qualities.

The Silver Pencilled Wyandotte, although a very new breed, has made a reputation for itself by its beauty, table and laying qualities, which are attracting the attention of the poultry man, says a writer in an exchange. Good birds are in great demand, and, in fact, they are hard to get at present, as they are being kept for breeding purposes. Poultrymen claim they are very hard to breed. This I will admit to a certain extent, but a good bird can be easily picked out by an expert judge; but this is also the case with many of our other breeds. I think it is safe to say that in a reasonable time this grand breed will be a leading one in the show-room.

BLACK-HEAD KILLS TURKEYS

As There Is No Known Cure, Bird Should Be Killed and Body Cremated—Cause of Disease.

(By R. F. KAUFF, Pathologist, Colorado Agricultural College.)

There has been considerable loss among turkeys in Colorado this fall from black head, or what is scientifically known as Enterohepatitis. The name black head was given because the head is supposed to turn purple when the turkey is attacked by the disease. This we have found not always to be true. The name Enterohepatitis was given on account of the greater diseased areas occurring in the intestines and liver.

The disease is caused by a single celled animal parasite called Amoeba melanocephala. The germs, or protozoa, is taken into the body through the food, or water, and becomes lodged in the mucous membrane of the esophagus, or blind gut. Here it produces thickening of the wall, due to inflammation, and later, ulceration. The liver becomes infected, and the infected areas, the liver cells, are destroyed. In a turkey dead of the disease the liver is enlarged up to more than twice its normal size. Over the surface will be not a whitish or yellowish green areas. These represent the areas of dead tissue.

Treatment.—This consists principally in preventing the spread of the disease; when a bird has developed the disease there is no known cure. The premises should be as thoroughly cleaned as possible and all rubbish burned. Then, disinfection, as far as possible, with a five per cent. solution of carbolic acid, or cresolin. Sick turkeys should be isolated and not allowed to run around and spread the germs of the disease, and thus be the cause of others becoming infected. As there is no known cure for the disease, the turkey had better be killed and the body cremated. Feed should be given in troughs, rather than thrown on the infected ground, and thus increase the danger of infection. The watering troughs should be cleaned so that they can be thoroughly cleaned morning and night. An intestinal antiseptic should be given in the water. One teaspoonful of dilute hydrochloric acid to each quart of water, or one teaspoonful of the crystals permanganate of potash to the ten quart bucket of water, may be given.

Chickens for Early Season.

In some sections the farmers have an excellent opportunity to raise chickens for the early season, for their crops do not need much attention until after that time and the labor can be made to reap great profits from the fowls. Retain the best layers for the mothers and if the hens are not broody, which will probably be the case, use incubators and hatch ducks and chicks in time to reach the late winter and early spring resorts and then hatch out another lot for the spring season.

Hens Too Fat.

Hens, as well as some humans, sometimes get too fat to work. But perhaps that is not so often the cause of no eggs as many would lead us to suppose. While it is true that some flocks may be kept too fat to lay, it is more often true that not enough of the right kind of feed is used to produce good egg yields.

MOODS.

"Alas!" he cried in deep despair, "I've ever had my way; I meet with failure everywhere, Endeavor as I may; The world is cold, my hopes are dead, My efforts all are vain; I've learned ad success life can teach, And never more in triumph reach The goal I've sought to gain."

Upon the morrow he arose Determined to succeed; He did not whine about his woes, His heart was glad, indeed; Within his breast there was no room For real or fancied grief; His goal was bright that had been dim, Because his wife had given him A dose of liver pills. —S. E. Kiser, in Chicago Record-Herald.

Shock Alarmed Glasgow.

Severe earthquake shocks are rare in Scotland and therefore the districts surrounding Glasgow were thrown into a state of considerable alarm last week following a sudden jar and upheaval which lasted for a few seconds. The inhabitants rushed from their houses into the streets, thinking at first that the shocks were caused by an explosion at a gasworks. No serious damage was done, although the earth tremors caused many gas meters to break. Buildings in Glasgow were shaken, crockery was rattled, and the girls in the telephone exchanges were alarmed by many bells being set ringing. The same area was shaken in 1885.

Portuguese Legion of Honor.

One of the first acts of the new Portuguese government on coming into power was to suppress the Order of Christ of Portugal, the red ribbon of which was so much esteemed. Then a difficulty arose as to how they were to reward their revolutionary friends. Numbers were clamoring for recognition. Then the council met in solemn convocation, and after a long discussion it was decided to create a Portuguese Legion of Honor, and naturally they decided that the ribbon should be purple. The reason for the suppression of Portugal's famous honor is stated by a Paris contemporary to have been due to a desire to placate the anti-clericals.

Carnegie's Benefactions.

Andrew Carnegie has succeeded not only in making himself the second richest man in the world, but also in enriching several of his fellow countrymen, says the London Chronicle. When the "star-spangled Scot" retired from business his fortune was estimated at $375,000,000, and he had made about $200,000,000 for his friends and partners, a large proportion of whom are of Scottish birth. These include George Lauder, his cousin, who now lives in retirement at Pittsburg, with at least $20,000,000 to soothe his declining years; Thomas Morrison, also a cousin, and Alexander Peacock, another son of Dunfermline, likewise amassed huge fortunes at Pittsburg.

WOMAN'S PAGE

The Evening Chit-Chat

By RUTH CAMERON.

THE present system of late hours, overdress and exciting pleasures continues the children of today will tomorrow have nothing within themselves to satisfy their wants. The reading of good books, the study of nature, the simple converse with friends will be "too slow" for them.

Like drugs, excitement will become a habit, and weakened mental and spiritual natures will crave more and more for it all the time.

Such is the message to mothers from Mrs. Frank P. Pray, a society woman of San Diego, who is at the head of a movement in California to disown of and inhibition of their children on the part of school children, courage overdress and late hours that ought to find echo in the hearts of mothers all over the United States.

On the trolley car yesterday I happened to sit opposite a group of girls who were going home from high school. They were dressed in the extreme of fashion.

And not of children's fashion either, but of grown-ups. One wore a black velvet coat, another a silk dress with a fur coat, and another an elaborately braided velvet suit.

Elaborate gold bracelets and funny long chains were very much in evidence.

Three of the five wore veils. All had toques or hats which would have been much more suitable for their married sisters.

Rice powder had evidently been used by four of the girls and all the collars looked as if they represented at least an hour of time and ten dollars' worth of hair.

The snatches of conversation that reached my ears were mostly about boys, dates, dances and similar subjects.

I got off the car wondering sadly to myself, "Where are the children of yesterday?" the dear, rosy-cheeked, plumed, short-skirted high school girls who talked of studying and counting and slating rather than of dances, and who left rice powder and veils strictly to grown-ups.

I read a prophecy the other day that according to the way the birth rate has decreased in the last thousand years, children will become extinct in about one hundred and fifty years.

Personally, I seem to feel that there is no danger of our ceasing to bring children into the world, but it does seem to me that if we keep on spoiling our progeny the way we do at present, children will become extinct because our babies will go straight from the cradle into grown-up estate.

In the same dispatch which tells of Mrs. Pray's warning, we are also informed that "in other cities of California the educators have taken steps to stop overdress and inhibition of their children." At Stockton a notice was given out that any girl caught wearing imitation curls would be sent home. Fresno educators refused to permit the use of face powder and—do you think that's going to do any good?

Because it isn't.

Listen to the rest of the sentence which I chipped in two: "And the girls, aided by their parents, raised a useful rumble because they declared it was impossible to prevent young women without the use of powder."

Reforms of this sort must come from the homes.

It is only the mothers and fathers who can see that the girls wear proper school clothes to school.

It is only the mothers and fathers who can see that their social life is confined within proper bounds and that they go to bed early, as they should, every night except Friday and Saturday.

It is only mothers and fathers who can see that their daughters are guided toward normal girlish interests and kept from thinking wholly of fashions and furbelows, of powder and parties.

I hope Mrs. Pray's warning will be repeated all over the country and will arouse mothers and fathers to the harm they are allowing their girls to do themselves.

APPRECIATED BUT NEVER SEEN BY FATHER.

THE HOME ATMOSPHERE.

Family life should be one of the utmost deference and respect. It is a peculiar phase of human nature that we are often more considerate to strangers than we are to those who in the very nature of things are nearest and dearest to us.

Why should we fret and scold until we make home life intolerable? Why should we carry a grudge into our homes every time we leave "business"? Why should we demand services of those in the home circle which we only request in the most respectful manner from those outside of it?

Why should a man say to his wife "May, I want my slippers. Bring them to me," and use a tone of command when he knows he wouldn't address the voracious lackey in a similar manner? Why should May use an irritating, commanding tone towards John when she wants any little service done and why do both order the children around as if they were a lot of unfeeling, unthinking little minions who know no better than to obey the treatment without protest?

Of all places on earth the home is the place where the best and the sweetest side of character should be shown. It is there that the softest tones and the kindest actions should prevail. It is there that unfailing and uniform courtesy should be the rule and where every member should use his or her utmost effort to keep the family life untroubled by the irritating experiences of the life outside of it.

Harsh language towards children, constant chiding and scolding, blows and taunting words do not preserve a life of refinement of thought and action for the children so brought up. Constant nagging and scolding do not improve the temper of the little folk nor do they make them more considerate of faithful to their duties.

Fads and Fashions

New York, Feb. 2.—Judging from appearances the fur season is at its height just now. Be the weather cold or mild, dry and clear, or gloomy and raw, furs may be seen everywhere.

Long, enveloping coats of real seal, musquash or electric seal, are seen on all sides, trimmed heavily around the hem with some contrasting fur, chinilla, ermine, skunk or opossum, the shawl or Russian collar and cuffs of corresponding peltry.

Possessors of sable, chinilla or ermine, with broad turn-over collars and albeline, are the most popular worn by fashionable women, who, moreover, indulge in magnificent manures of all kinds, ermine, hemmed and ornamented with sable or seal. Labrador lynx and other fancy furs are made up into muffs and toques, while the ultra-smart and stylish broadtail coats, trimmed and lined with sable, skunk or chinilla, according to the taste of the wearer, are the last words of distinguished fashion.

Lincoln pony coats are worn with collars of doeklin embroidered with silver and large tortoise-shell buttons. For dirty weather these paleots do much for the wearer. Countesses and broad scarfs are seen, bordered with fur of a contrasting color, not the least attractive being those of the soft gray minkskin lined with soft to match, and bordered with seal or baby hair, accompanied by voluminous muffs to match.

The new style mantles or manteaux are extremely fashionable just now. These mantles entirely cover the dress, and have taken the place of the tailor costume for all dressy occasions.

It is not to be inferred that the practical coat and skirt in velvet or satin are no longer worn by the woman or girl who wishes, but for all elegant purposes it must be admitted that the mantle has taken precedence, and thrown every other kind of toilet into the shade. For this reason the "fitter robes" are so much in demand.

Women require a number of these "fitter robes" to vary the effect, as their mantles are either laid aside or left open at the fashionable tea meetings.

These little dresses worn with the velvet or fur mantle, are so much prettier than the blouse and skirt that have formed the home dress of more than half the number of women in the civilized world for the last ten years.

Everywhere, on gowns and coats and evening wraps and separate blouses and negligees, the sailor collar is prevalent. It is the one new touch in neckwear this season. As a rule it is of generous proportions, sometimes reaching almost to the waist, and it may be of any color or fabric. Moreover, it may or may not match the rest of the costume. The sailor collar effect may, of course, be an apparent one. In this case the collar is simply a stiffened square applied on the blouse and is used chiefly because it gives an appearance of height.

For millinery of every sort and kind is enjoying a wonderful popularity this season, and worn with styles and muffs to match, these hats in skunk and in fox, in ermine and in gray squirrel, have proved themselves equally comfortable and becoming. The furriers seem to have discovered some means, too, of making this kind of headgear comparatively light in weight, a great improvement on the state of things which prevailed only a year ago, when to wear a fur hat usually meant a bad headache for the wearer.

Fortunate by this is no longer the case, for one can procure nowadays soft felt hats in ermine and in minkskin, which are as light as a feather and easily warm in the bargain. They are so softly mounted, too, that they can be folded and draped to the shape of the head, almost as easily as if they were made of velvet, and in this way a deft touch here and there may often make all the difference between a flimsy effect which is chic and striking, or merely commonplace. Contrasts of brilliant color are sometimes introduced very successfully on these fur toques. In the shape of a bunch of bright violets or a large flower in orange velvet on a minkskin background.

In the case of the hats made in skunk and in black fox, Louis XV. bows are being used for trimming, carried out in metallic trimming or ribbon. The smartest new toques are very soft; in the hand they appear shapeless, on the head they follow every line of the head. Brim and crown are the same height, but of different materials. A velvet crown, encircled with a band of old gold, jeweled passementerie and with a very full agrette, either white or black. This model is copied in an endless variety of colors and fabrics and is one of the most deviously popular of the season. Agrettes and feathers of all descriptions are not placed as high as was the fashion last year, and the trimming is more toward the back than the front of the hat.

Almost without exception the fashionable hat is worn well down over the head, the head size being made large enough to permit of this. Should it prove unbecoming in these circumstances, then a halo or a band can be worn in addition, but only when the hat is otherwise unbecoming. Apparently the aim of the present fashion is to cover up as much of the hair as possible, but as this is singularly trying to the majority of women, something has to be done to mitigate the trouble, and the brim of the hat is rolled up or turned back on one side far enough to throw out sufficient hair to soften the face more becomingly. The brims of the large hats extend out at the back, but the line they give is not ugly, provided the line at the side is becoming.

High crowned turbans and full crowned bonnet shapes hobnob with big picture hats. Styles in these show great variety. The flower and velvet combinations are the richest and most effective for early spring wear.

All kinds of flowers are employed for them—carnations, narcissus, hyacinths, lilacs, violets, gardenias and roses, and

This model is copied in an endless variety of colors and fabrics and is one of the most deviously popular of the season. Agrettes and feathers of all descriptions are not placed as high as was the fashion last year, and the trimming is more toward the back than the front of the hat.

Almost without exception the fashionable hat is worn well down over the head, the head size being made large enough to permit of this. Should it prove unbecoming in these circumstances, then a halo or a band can be worn in addition, but only when the hat is otherwise unbecoming. Apparently the aim of the present fashion is to cover up as much of the hair as possible, but as this is singularly trying to the majority of women, something has to be done to mitigate the trouble, and the brim of the hat is rolled up or turned back on one side far enough to throw out sufficient hair to soften the face more becomingly. The brims of the large hats extend out at the back, but the line they give is not ugly, provided the line at the side is becoming.

High crowned turbans and full crowned bonnet shapes hobnob with big picture hats. Styles in these show great variety. The flower and velvet combinations are the richest and most effective for early spring wear.

All kinds of flowers are employed for them—carnations, narcissus, hyacinths, lilacs, violets, gardenias and roses, and are sometimes introduced very successfully on these fur toques. In the shape of a bunch of bright violets or a large flower in orange velvet on a minkskin background.

In the case of the hats made in skunk and in black fox, Louis XV. bows are being used for trimming, carried out in metallic trimming or ribbon. The smartest new toques are very soft; in the hand they appear shapeless, on the head they follow every line of the head. Brim and crown are the same height, but of different materials. A velvet crown, encircled with a band of old gold, jeweled passementerie and with a very full agrette, either white or black. This model is copied in an endless variety of colors and fabrics and is one of the most deviously popular of the season. Agrettes and feathers of all descriptions are not placed as high as was the fashion last year, and the trimming is more toward the back than the front of the hat.

Backache Means Dying Kidneys.

A Remarkable Treatment That Saves the Kidneys. How You May Cure Yourself Quickly and Thoroughly.

With the progress of science comes one remarkable treatment for kidney disease, which has been so thoroughly tested and its results have proven so revolutionary that a well known firm in Michigan has undertaken its distribution into every part of the country.

Those who suffer from kidney trouble and the diseases resulting from it will find this treatment to be thoroughly guaranteed. This should assure at least a positive cure in every instance.

Every man and woman should know that backache is usually a well-defined symptom of advancing kidney disease which may end fatally unless treated in time; that rheumatism and bladder trouble are caused from nothing more nor less than kidneys that do not filter the poison from the blood; that dropsy, bright's disease, diabetes and bladder troubles are caused by bad kidneys.

Once they are made to work properly, these diseases should quickly disappear. This is done by the new treatment, Dr. Dyer's Kidney Pills.

Every true organ who has pain in the small of the back, profuse or scanty urination, pain in the bladder, cloudy or foul urine, not to fail to get a package today of Dr. Dyer's Kidney Pills, and drop all other kidney treatments.

Senator Stevenson of Washington, writes from Olympia: "I suffered for many years with backache, and Dr. Dyer's Kidney Pills in curing kidney and bladder trouble. I know whereof I speak."

Dr. Dyer's Kidney Pills are now sold at all drug stores—10 pills—10 days' treatment—25 cents, or direct from Dyer Medical Co., Boston, U.S.A., Mich. If you would like to try them, the most satisfactory

WHERE THE FLAG IS APPRECIATED

LETTER FOR THE LEPER COLONY AT MOLOKI.

FROM THE HOME OF DEATH

Where the Unfortunates Live Yet Grieve in the Stars and Stripes That Wave Over Them.

From Janesville to far off Molokai, is a far cry. It is a step across the continent and the wide Pacific to the Hawaiian Islands yet the Stars and Stripes wave as proudly there as here.

"FATHER JOSEPH" IN THE MIDST OF HIS LEPER COLONY.

In Janesville. They wave over a man who lived here years ago, a man who fought bravely in the army during the war and who later forewent the pomp and vanity of this world to become the leader, the teacher, the friend of the poor unfortunate that inhabit the "city of the dead" at the leper colony at Kalawao Molokai, "Father" Joseph Dutton.

From time to time it has been the privilege of the Gazette to print letters from "Father Joseph" to illustrate them with pictures, letters written to his friends in Janesville. H. L. Shavlin is one of those who keeps the former Janesville man in touch with his old home world and receives frequent communications from him in reply. The following account of the flag raising held at this colony on December 24th is interesting in itself aside from the fact that it is written by a self exiled former resident who has given up his life to care for these poor unfortunates.

Kalawao, The flag goes up. The Leprosarium opens. Uncle Sam is on deck. December 24th, 1909.

Our flag raising this day conforms to a time honored custom among Americans of having the flag as a partner in the affairs of life. Looking backward along the vista, we see our faithful everywhere waving.

In each country, there is more or less respect for the flag of that country, but nowhere does any flag command greater affection than our own Star Spangled Banner in its own native land. The American takes it into his family as a trusted companion. Our Starry Banner is sponsor for many high ideals, for much practical work; it is the expression of our hopes, it stimulates national power, it inspires the patriot, defends the weak, and even declares for justice, purity and valor. Today we see it dedicated to the protection and furtherance of a great work of humanity, to combat a disease that for centuries has retarded every attack. While these former efforts have been earnest and widespread, this recently completed Leprosarium, leprosy settlement, comes into action on a scale and with an equipment, far superior to anything of the past.

Authorized by our general Government, the work of construction and outfitting has been carried on by the public health and marine hospital service under Dr. Wyman, Surgeon General. This has been accomplished in the most thorough manner, with careful attention to every detail. No expense has been spared. Every part of the elaborate and extensive work is of the best quality, and according to the highest standards of modern science.

It is a wonderful establishment, now dedicated to a noble purpose to find a remedy for leprosy, this mysterious affliction that some of us have been associated with for so many years at the settlement upon Molokai, one of the Mid-Pacific Bouquet of Isles, now called Hawaii.

To the writer, trying from Father Dutton's time to help in various ways, including what might be termed "home made doctoring", to him, the advanced science seems wonderful. Medical work, under the Territory, in recent years, has made a great advance. Now comes this latest marvel under the powerful protection of Uncle Sam; escorted through it recently by Dr. Hollmann, the writer was thinking of the extensive, but very crude plan for a building establishment, made in 1880, by Father Dutton and the writer, the construction being intended to go on this very ground, wondering what Father Dutton would say to this night work, a work so many times greater than anything he ever dreamt of, and furthermore, as to just how much the coming of the various betterments of these later years may have been furthered by the unique and noble service that he gave here at the settlement in those days when everything was crude.

The efficient and highly scientific U. S. service that carries this new work on, will be greatly honored, and deserves to be.

Our flag has hardly waved for a purpose more fraught with interests of mankind. Success will mean a blessing for the ages to come, and honor to our whole country.

I propose this sentiment, "The Leprosarium and the Stars and Stripes" forever.

Very Sincerely,
JOSEPH DUTTON.

LONG SHOWS STILL PLEASE BIG HOUSES

Matinee and Evening Performance of Yesterday Were Enjoyed by Large Audiences.

Frank E. Long Company continue to keep up the high standard of their plays and of their work at the Myers Grand. They served two "bullseyes" yesterday, with "The Parsons Wife" at the matinee and "The Lost Trail" at night; both plays were well acted and well staged. Miss Anna Sullivan is adding new friends to her already large list of admirers at every performance, and she is winning them squarely on character and artistic work, and her fascinating personality. The same general excellence in the supporting company that was noted the first night continues through each performance and their is no "let down" in their work. "Thorns and Orange Blossoms", the play that never grows old, will be the attraction tonight. As "a pleaser", this drama ranks with "Way Down East", "East Lynne" and the "Old Homestead". In its firm hold on public favor, "Tomorrow, and Tomorrow, and Tomorrow" will be seen in the great comedy success of the present season, "The Bowery Girl".

Mr. Long believes in the adage "All ways leave them laughing when you say Good Bye" and "The Bowery Girl" is warranted to do this, as she never fails to keep her auditors in tears of laughter from the rise of the curtain until the last line is spoken.

The fun in this clever farce comedy is all of the clean, wholesome kind, as distinguished from the brand so frequently seen in the salacious French comedies which have been done over into English. "The Bowery Girl" is American, and like all American girls she is "all right."

MONROE MURDERER DIED LAST NIGHT, RESULT OF WOUNDS

Self-inflicted injuries of George Percy After Murder of Fred Liechti

George Percy, the man who formerly lived in Janesville and who murdered Fred Liechti, a proprietor of a popular Monroe saloon, in a quarrel last Tuesday evening, died last night at half past six o'clock as a result of the injuries he received after the shooting of Liechti in an attempt at suicide.

Percy's death came rather unexpectedly although yesterday afternoon it was uncertain what would be the outcome of his wounds. One of his arms filled with blood and it is thought that some of the blood collected on the brain causing his death. There was no circulation in the wounded member and it had turned blue during the intense suffering.

Rev. Sebastian Rehr of St. Mary's catholic church at Monroe was with Percy at the time of his death, although he did not know that the man was dying at the time he was called. Percy was a man about 45 years old. He came here ten years ago and always claimed to be a Cuban, but it is stated that he was a New Orleans Creole. He manufactured cigars here and closed his factory to go into business at Janesville a year or more ago but the undertaking was not successful. Of late he has been experimenting with a preparation for the treatment of musty and moldy tobacco and had it patented some months ago. His financial trouble and the large return he fancied would come to him through the invention he believed to have monopolized his mind. For some time it has been known that he was mentally defective, and by many he was considered treacherous and a dangerous character. It is said he always carried a stillie and at times he would carry a gun.

Percy was a member of the T. U. C. T. a German lodge, and also of the Concordia lodge of Odd Fellows at Monroe. The latter organization, however, expelled him on the night of the murder.

Arrangements for the funeral have not been entirely completed, but it will undoubtedly occur tomorrow. Percy has a brother, Robert, living in Chicago, who has been sent for and will arrive in Monroe the evening of the funeral. The funeral of Fred Liechti, Percy's victim, will be held Saturday afternoon. At the coroner's inquest held yesterday afternoon the jury reported that Liechti met his death by a wound inflicted by a bullet from a revolver which was in the hands of George Percy. The witnesses in the case were, Carl Ruf, Gottfried Vogel, W. O. Hunt and W. A. Nance.

NEARLY KICKED TO DEATH BY A HORSE

Monroe Man Had Narrow Escape From Instant Death in Bad Mix-Up With A Delivery Horse.

Monroe, Wis., Feb. 2.—Will Kelly, who conducts a laundry on West Racine street, came near meeting death when kicked by a horse near the electric light plant. Mr. Kelly was riding to his work and one of the shafts on his delivery wagon broke. The horse ran until stopped by being run into a box car that stood on the spur of the lighting plant. In attempting to unhitch the tug the horse kicked him in the head just above the right temple. A horse was made in Kelly's head about a quarter of an inch deep. Had the blow struck him in the temple, he would have instantly met death.

Advertising Talks

CITIES BOOST THEMSELVES

American Towns and States Spend Thousands of Dollars in Advertising.

Spokane, Wash., laid out more than $100,000 last year, holding herself up to the public gaze; Memphis expects to spend $25,000 this year for the same purpose; St. Paul, $15,000; Chicago, with a "Booster club" of 3,000 hunters, pays an advertising manager a salary of $10,000 a year and does not consider that she really needs much boosting either.

The advertising bills of the city of New York during the last six years aggregated a total of $5,000,000, says Business, Denver, Dec. 20, 1909. Detroit, Kansas City, Mo.; St. Louis, Toledo, Minneapolis, Montgomery, Ala.; Wichita, Kan.; Indianapolis, New Orleans, Rochester, Cleveland—one might fill a page with a list of the cities that are boosting and booming themselves, systematically and resolutely, and laying out their good, hard coin to do it.

The Greater Georgia association, with a membership of nearly 20,000, is at work raising $200,000 to be used in exploiting the state and expects to establish permanent advertising headquarters in many cities throughout the country. Mississippi is getting busy with a somewhat similar plan; eighty Nebraska newspapers have pledged themselves to methodically exploit their commonwealth and to raise $25,000 within the coming year with which to do the work; the Northern Pacific railway company has just put a force of thirty writers and publicity men to work on a campaign of advertising for Oregon.

Household Economy

How to Have the Best Cough Syrup and Save $2, by Making It at Home.

Cough medicines, as a rule, contain a large quantity of plain syrup. If you take one pint of granulated sugar, add 1/2 pint of warm water, and stir about 2 minutes, you have as good syrup as money could buy.

If you will then put 2 1/2 ounces of Pinex (fifty cents' worth) in a pint bottle, and fill it up with the Sugar Syrup, you will have as much cough syrup as you could buy ready-made for $2.50. It keeps perfectly.

And you will find it the best cough syrup you ever used—even in whooping cough. You can feel it take hold—usually stops the cough in several hours in 24 hours. It is just laxative enough, has a good tonic effect and taste is pleasant. Take a teaspoonful every one, two or three hours.

It is a splendid remedy, too, for hoarseness, asthma, chest pains, etc. Pinex is the most valuable concentrated compound of Norway white pine extract, rich in gallicol and all the healing pine elements. No other preparation will work in this formula.

This recipe for making cough remedy with Pinex and Sugar Syrup is now used and prized in thousands of homes in the United States and Canada. The plan has often been imitated but never successfully.

A guarantee of absolute satisfaction, or money promptly refunded, goes with this recipe. Your druggist has Pinex, or we will get it for you. If not, send to The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

Daily Science Talk

By FREDERIC CAMPBELL.

President Department of Astronomy, Brooklyn Institute of Arts and Sciences.

ANIMALS' MINDS.

Have they minds? Do animals think, or, as some have taught, are they mere automata? Those who have read the recent books of authorities on animal life and ways can have but one answer to such questions, and it will be identical with that given by those who have made their own observations—an animal does think; therefore it has a mind.

"That the human mind is superior to that of any of the lower animals we are of course sure. But, while the lower animals are without the higher powers with which man is endowed, such as the idea of cause and effect, the idea of God, the faculty of speech, they are in their mental makeup like us in some things and even superior to us in others.

Last year German psychologists were interested in an educated horse of the name of Hans, which displayed extraordinary intelligence. These learned observers assert that there could have been no trickery practiced in the tests made, which included spelling and reading handwriting. Of course the horse had been trained to this, but he must have been more than a living machine to be capable of such

More recently a gamekeeper near Hamburg has offered his trained dog to a commission of investigation, headed by Professor Pfungst of Berlin university. The commission found that the dog had a vocabulary of seven words which were clearly articulated, four being of two syllables, and it is declared that the dog understands what is said to him.

When parrots speak with perfect facility and seem often to comprehend what they say it seems as if other animals might be taught the same.

Y. M. C. A. EXHIBITION PROVES BIG SUCCESS

Large Crowd Seen the Second of Series of Monthly Open Nights at Gymnasium.

Last night was open night at the Y. M. C. A. building and a record breaking crowd turned out to witness the exhibition given by the gymnasium classes. This was the second of a series of monthly affairs of this kind. The chairman of the different committees who had charge of the evening were, T. E. Cyalton, social work; W. Ham Vlynn, entertainment; A. J. Thiel, reception; and Lynn Whaley, advertising.

A very interesting program had been prepared and was as follows: Address by Prof. H. C. Buell, "Value of Exercise"; Violin solo, Mr. O'Driscoll; Vocal solo, E. E. Van Pool; Relay race between teams of Winslow and French; Basketball game between Maroons and Crescents; Vocal, Malo Quirlette. Prof. Buell spoke of the part that physical prowess had played in the life of different nations and said that healthy exercise was the foundation of building up a sturdy manhood. French's team defeated Winslow's in a closely contested relay race. The result of the basketball game was a victory for the Crescents, that team defeating their opponents, the Maroons, by a score of 32 to 24. The Maroons were the touted champions in the Senior league and their defeat was a surprise.

Cavanagh, Forest Ranger

The Great Conservation
Novel

CHAPTER VI. IN THE VIOLENT PART.

TALKING about Cavanagh was quite too absorbingly interesting to both Lee and Redfield to permit of any study of the landscape, which went by as it dissembled by the chariot wheels of some contemptuous magellan. Redfield's eyes were mostly on the road (in the manner of the careful auto driver), but when he did look up it was to admire the color and pulse of his seat mate, who made the landscape of small account.

She kept the conversation to the desired point. "Mr. Cavanagh's work interests me very much. It seems very important, and it must be new, for I never heard of a forest ranger when I was a child."

"The forester is new, at least in America," he answered. "My dear young lady, you are returned just in the most momentous period in the history of the west. The old dominion—the cattle range—is passing. The supremacy of the cowboy is ended. The cowboy boss is rising out. The cowboy is pitching alfalfa and swearing horribly as he blisters his hands. Some of the rangers at the moment are men of western training, like Ross, but whose allegiance is now to Uncle Sam. With others that transfer of allegiance is not quite complete; hence the insolence of men like Gregg, who think they can bribe or intimidate these forest guards and so obtain favors. The newer men are college bred, real foresters. But you can't know what it all means till you see Ross or some other ranger on his own beat. We'll make up a little party some day and drop down upon him and have him show us about. It's a lonely life, and so the ranger keeps open house. Would you like to go?"

"Oh, yes, indeed. I'm eager to get into the mountains. Every night as I see the sun go down over them I wonder what the world is like up there."

Then he began very delicately to inquire about her eastern experience. There was not much to tell. In a lovely old town not far from Philadelphia, where her aunt lived, she had spent ten years of happy exile. "I was horribly lonely and homesick at first," she said. "Mother wrote only short letters, and my father never wrote at all. I didn't know he was dead then. He was always good to me. He wasn't a bad man, was he?"

"No," responded Redfield without hesitation. "He was very like the rest of us; only a little more reckless and a little more partisan, that's all. He was a dashing horseman and a dead shot, and so naturally a leader of these daredevils. He was popular with both sides of the controversy up to the very moment when he went south to lead the invaders against the rustlers."

"What was it all about? I never understood it. What were they fighting about?"

"In a sense, it was all very simple. You see, Uncle Sam in his careless, do nothing way has always left his range to the man who got there first. That was the gentleman. At first there was grass enough for all, but as we built sheds and corrals about watering places we came to claim rights on the range. We usually secured by fraud homesteads in the sections containing water and we, in hand, stood off the man who came after. Gradually, after much shooting and hawking, we parceled out the range and settled down, covering practically the whole state. Our adjustments were not perfect, but our system was working smoothly for us who controlled the range. We had convinced ourselves and pretty nearly everybody else that the state was only fit for cattle grazing and that we were the most competent grazers; furthermore, we were in possession, and no man could come in without our consent."

"However, a very curious law of our own making was our undoing. Of course the 'hewer' or 'punkin roller,' as we contemptuously called the small farmer, began sowing in here and there in spite of our guns, but he was only a mosquito bite in comparison with the trouble when our cowpunchers stirred up. Perhaps you remember enough about the business to know that an unbranded yearling calf without its mother is called a maverick?"

"Yes; I remember that. It belongs to the man who finds him and brands him."

"Precisely. Now, that law worked very nicely so long as the poor cowboy was willing to catch and brand him for his employer, but it proved a 'joker' when he woke up and said to his fellows, 'Why brand these mavericks at $5 per head for this or that outfit when the law says they belong to the man who finds them?'"

Lee Virginia looked up brightly. "That seems right to me."

"Ah, yes, but wait! We gentlemen had large herds, and the probabilities were that the calf belonged to some one of us, whereas the cowboy, having no herd at all, knew the maverick belonged to some one's herd. True, the law said it was his, but the law did not mean to reward the freeholder. Yet that is exactly what it did. At first only a few outlaws took advantage of it, but hard years came on, the cattle business became less and less profitable, we were forced to lay off our men, and so at last the range swarmed with idle cowpunchers. Then came the breakdown in our scheme. The cowboys took to 'mavericking' on their own account. Some of them had the grace to go into partnership with some farmer and so claim a small bunch of cows, but others suddenly and miraculously acquired herds of their own. From keeping within the law they passed to violent methods. They all the tongues of calves for the purpose of separating them from their mothers. Finding he could not suck, bossy would at last wander away from his dam and so become a maverick. In short, manly reliance on the range."

"But surely my father had nothing to do with this?"

"No; your father up to this time had been on good terms with everybody. He had a small herd of cattle down the river, which he owned in common with a man named Hart."

"I remember him."

"It was well thought of by all the big outfits, and when the situation became intolerable and we got together to weed out the rustlers, as these cattle thieves were called, your father was approached and converted to a belief in drastic measures. He had suffered less than the rest of us because of his small herd and the fact that he was very popular among the cowboys. So far as I was concerned, the use of violent methods revolted me. My training in the east had made me a respecter of the law. 'Change the law,' I said. 'The law is all right,' they replied; 'the trouble is with these rustlers. We'll hang a few of 'em, and that will break up the business.'"

Parts of this story came back to the girl's mind, producing momentary flashes of perfect recollection. She heard again the voices of excited men arguing over and over the question of "mavericking," and she saw her father as he rode up to the house—that last day before he went south. Redfield went on. "The whole plan as developed was silly, and I wonder still that Ed Wetherford, who knew the 'hewer' and the cowboy so well, should have lent his aid to it. The cattleman, some from Cheyenne, some from Denver and a few from New York and Chicago, agreed to finance a sort of vigilante corps composed of men from the outside on the understanding that this policing body should be commanded by one of their own number. Your father was chosen second in command and was to guide the party, for he knew almost every one of the rustlers and could ride directly to their doors."

"I wish he hadn't done that," murmured the girl.

"I must be frank with you, Virginia. I can't excuse that in him. It was a kind of treachery. He must have been warped by his associates. They convinced him by some means that it was his duty, and one fine day the Fork was startled by a messenger who rode in to say that the cattle barons were coming with a hundred Texas bad men to clean out the town and to put their own men into office. This last was silly rot to me, but the people believed it."

The girl was tingling now. "I remember! I remember the men who rode into the town to give the alarm. I was scared almost breathless."

"I was in Sulphur City and did not hear of it till it was nearly all over," Redfield resumed, his speech showing a little of the excitement which thrilled through the girl's voice. "Well, the first act of vengeance was so ill considered that it practically ended the whole campaign. The invaders fell upon and killed two ranchers, one of whom was probably not a rustler at all, but a peaceable settler, and the other one they most barbarously hanged. More than this, they attacked and vainly tried to kill two settlers whom they met on the road—German farmers, with no connection, so far as known, with the thieves. These men escaped and gave the alarm. In a few hours the whole range was aflame with vengeful fire. The Forks, as you may recall, was like a swarm of hummingbirds. Every man and boy was armed and mounted. The storekeepers distributed guns and ammunition, leaders developed, and the embattled 'punkin rollers,' rustlers and townsmen rode out to meet the invaders."

The girl paled with memory of it. "It was terrible. I went all day without eating, and for two nights we were all too excited to sleep. It seemed as if too would be coming to an end. Mother cried because they wouldn't let her go with them. She didn't know father was leading the other army."

"She must have known soon, for it was reported that your father was among them. She certainly knew when they were driven to earth in that log fort, for they were obliged to restrain her by force from going to your father. As I run over those furious days it all seems incredible, like a sudden reversion to barbarism."

"How did it all end? The soldiers came, didn't they?"

"Yes; the long arm of Uncle Sam reached out and took hold upon the necks of both parties. I guess your father and his band would have died right there had not the regular army interfered. It only required a sergeant wearing Uncle Sam's uniform to come among those armed and furious cowboys and remove their prisoners."

"I saw that. It was very strange—that sergeant was so young and so brave."

No turned and smiled at her. "Do you know who that was?"

Her eyes flashed. She drew her breath with a gasp. "Was it Mr. Cavanagh?"

"Yes," it was Ross. He was serving in the regular army at the time. He had told me once that he felt no fear whatever. 'Uncle Sam's blue coat was like Siegfried's magic armor,' he said. 'It was the kind of thing that mounted police of Canada had been called upon to do many a time, and I went in and got my men.' That ended the war, so far as violent measures went, and it really ended the sovereignty of the cattleman. The power of the 'hewer' has steadily increased from that moment."

"But my father—what became of him? They took him away to the east, and that is all I ever knew. What do you think became of him?"

"I could never make up my mind. All sorts of rumors come to us concerning him. As a matter of fact, the state authorities sympathized with the cattle barons, and my own opinion is that your father was permitted to escape. He was afterward seen in Texas, and later it was reported that he had been killed there."

The girl sat still, listening to the tireless whirr of the machine and looking out at the purpling range with tear-mist eyes. At last she said, "I shall never think of my father as a bad man—he was always so gentle to me."

"You need not condemn him, my dear young lady. The people of the Forks—some of them, at least—consider him a traitor and regard you as the daughter of a renegade, but what does it matter? Each year sees the old west diminish, and already, in the work of the forest service, law and order advance. Notwithstanding all the shouting of herders and the bending to death of sheep, no hostile shot has ever been fired within the bounds of a national forest. In the work of the forest rangers lies the hope of ultimate peace and order over all the public lands."

The girl fell silent again, her mind filled with larger conceptions of life than her judgment had hitherto been called upon to meet. She knew that Redfield was right, and yet that world of the past—the world of the swift herdsman and his tramping, long horned, half wild kine—still appealed to her imagination. The west of her girlhood seemed heroic in memory. Even the quiet account of it to which she had just listened could not conceal its epic largeness of movement. The part which troubled her most was her father's treachery to his neighbors. That he should fight, that he should kill men in honorable warfare, she could understand, but not his treachery, his desertion of her mother and herself.

She came back to dwell at last on the action of that slim young soldier who had calmly ridden through the infuriated mob. She remembered that she had thrilled even then at the vague and impersonal power which he represented. To her childish mind he seemed to bear a charm, like the heroes of her story books—something which made him invulnerable. After a long pause Redfield spoke again. "The memory of your father will make life for a time a bit hard for you in Roaring Fork. Perhaps your mother's advice is sound. Why not come to Sulphur City, which is almost entirely of the new spirit?"

"If I can get my mother to come, too, I will be glad to do so, for I hate the Fork. But I will not leave her there, sick and alone."

"Much depends upon the doctor's examination tomorrow."

They had topped the divide now between the Fork and Sulphur creek basin, and the green fields, the alfalfa meadows and the painted farmhouses thickened beneath them. Strange how significant all these signs were now! A few days ago they had appeared doubtful improvements; now they represented the oncoming dominion of the east. They meant cleanliness and decent speech, good bread and sweet butter.

Redfield swept through the town, then turned up the stream directly toward the high wall of the range, which was ragged and abrupt at this point. They passed several charming farmhouses, and the western sky grew over more glorious with its plain color and saffron, and the range reassured its mastery over the girl. At last they came to the very jaws of the canyon, and there, in a deep natural grove of lofty cottonwood trees, Redfield passed before a high rustic gate which marked the beginning of his estate. The driveway was of gravel, and the intermingling of transplanted shrubs and pine trees showed the care of the professional gardener.

The house was far from being a castle. Indeed, it was very like a house in Bryn Mawr, except that it was built entirely of half-burnt logs, with a wide projecting roof. Giant hydrangeas and other flowering shrubs bordered the drive, and on the rustic terrace a lady in white was waiting.

Redfield slowed down and scrambled ungracefully out. But his voice was charming as he said: "Eleanor, this is Miss Wetherford. She was on the point of getting the blues, so I brought her away," he explained.

"Mrs. Redfield, quite as urban as the house, was a slim little woman of delicate habit, very far from the ordinary conception of a rancher's wife. Her manner was politely considerate, but not heatedly cordial (the visitor was not precisely here), and, though she warmed a little after looking into Virginia's face, she could not by any stretch of phrase be called cordial."

"Are you tired? Would you like to lie down before dinner?" she asked.

"Oh, no, indeed. Nothing over there me," Virginia responded, with a smile.

"You look like one in perfect health," continued her hostess in the envious tone of one who knew all too well what ill health meant. "Let me show you to your room."

The house was not precisely the palace the cowboy had reported it to be, but it was charmingly decorated, and the furnishings were tasteful. To the girl it was as if she had been trans-

"ELEANOR, THIS IS MISS WETHERFORD," home of one of her dearest friends in Chester. She was at once excited and humbly grateful.

"We dine at 7," Mrs. Redfield was saying, "so you can take a cup of tea without spoiling your dinner. Will you venture it?"

"If you please."

"Very well, come down soon and I'll have it ready. Mr. Redfield, I'm sure, will wait some."

Virginia's heart was dancing with delight of this home as she came down the stairs a little later. As they talked Mrs. Redfield studied the girl with increasing interest and favor and soon got at her point of view. She even secured a little more of her story, which matched fairly well with the account her husband had given. Her prejudices were swept away, and she treated her young guest as one well born and well educated woman treats another.

At last she said: "We dress for dinner, but any track you have will do. We are not troglodytes in our rules. There will be some neighbors in, but it isn't in any sense a 'party.'"

Lee Virginia went to her room borne high upon a new conception of the possibilities of the west. It was glorious to think that one could enjoy the refinement, the comfort, of the east at the same time that one dwelt within the inspiring shadow of the range. Her hands were a-tremble as she put on the bright madras gown which was all she had for evening wear. She felt very much like the schoolgirl again, and after she had done her best to look nice she took a seat in the little rocker with intent to compose herself for her meeting with strangers. "I wish we were dining without visitors," she said as she heard a carriage drive up. A little later a galloping horse entered the yard and stopped at the door. She heard voices in the hall and among them one with a very English accent, one that sounded precisely like those who had heard on the stage. At last she dared wait no longer and, taking courage from necessity, descended the stairs, a pleasant picture of vigorous yet somewhat subdued maidenhood.
